EASTERN NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Loss by the Portland Fire.

PORTLAND, Me., August 10.—After carefully comparing and reviewing the estimate of the loss by the fire it is put at about $500,000. The total insurance heard from is $158,000. The insurance on the Elevator and Grand Trunk Railroad property will probably carry it up to $200,000, or one-third of the total loss. The body of Frank Taylor has been recovered. The little girl has not been recovered, but there is now no doubt about her fate. Wm. Mattison, a stevedore, was in the hold of the Dirigo. He jumped overboard and was immediately drowned. This makes a loss of two men, two women and a little girl.

News from a Missing Ship.

NEW YORK, August 11.—Agents in this city of the missing steamer Tradit, have received a cable dispatch stating that on July 22d the [illegible] was signaled in latitude 46 10, longitude [illegible] 4, with her propeller broken and under canvas. She did not need assistance. Again on the 24th the vessel was spoken by the steamer Oceanica in latitude 46 10, longitude 45 37, steering north as before.

Fire in Roxbury.

BOSTON, August 11.—The extensive rope works of Sewell, Day & Co., in Roxbury, are burning.

The Green-eyed Monster's Doings.

NEW YORK, August 11.—In a fit of jealousy last evening, in Brooklyn, Wm. Anderson, aged 21, stabbed his intended wife, Ann Cunningham, aged 14, eleven times, and then stabbed himself three times. The girl is thought to be fatally wounded.

The Manitoba Squabble.

Governor Austin and Mayor Brackett of Minneapolis had two interviews at Long Branch with the President regarding the Manitoba affair, and explained the whole matter from the beginning, dwelling especially on the cruelty with which the prisoners are treated by the Manitoba authorities. They also sought to impress upon the President the necessity for speedy action, as they feared that people in Minnesota, unless something was done at once, would take the settlement of the case into their own hands. The President (according to our dispatch) gave the Governor and Mayor to understand that unless the matter was disposed of in a reasonable time a demand in unmistakable terms would be made on the British Government, which would be followed by further action. The President then asked the Governor and Mayor to [illegible] their statements to writing, which they did, and the paper was forwarded to Secretary Fish, who will be visited to-day by its authors.

[illegible] Accident.

BALTIMORE, August 10.—A sleeping car on the Wilmington, Columbia & Augusta Railroad was thrown off the track near Hamburg this morning. Two passengers were badly injured.

Our [illegible] Murder.

BALTIMORE, August 10.—The fireman of the steamship Baltimore, named Granger, left the steamer to-night with two bottles of liquor. Two Custom House officers, named Carson and Norton, objected, but Granger passed on, followed by Carson. In a few minutes a pistol shot was heard, and other parties proceeding to the spot, found Granger shot in the head. He was taken on board the steamer and died soon after. Carson took a small boat and went to the Custom House. He will have to surrender to the police authorities in the morning.

Another Murder.

NEW YORK, August 11.—In the cigar manufactory of Steinhart Bros. & Schonlake, 566 Vesey street, this morning, Ephraim Steinhart, brother of one of the proprietors, while standing behind Samuel Schonlake, shot him and then swallowed the contents of a bottle of poison, and then shot himself. Schonlake will probably live.

NEW YORK, August 11.—Alfred Steinhart, who shot Samuel Schonlake, his brother's partner, in their store on Vesey street this morning, was learning the cigar business. The only reason Schonlake gives for the shooting is that he told Steinhart to keep away from his employ, and had discharged him on Friday last.

Recovery of the Dead from the Wawasset.

WASHINGTON, August 10.—The steamer Vanderbilt arrived to-night from the scene of the Wawasset disaster with six more dead bodies. Five of them have been recognized as those of Geo. W. Cook, a grocery man of Washington; Richard Murray, (colored) passenger; Geo. Tibbs (colored), deck hand; Mary Blackwell (colored), passenger; a little girl about 12 years of age, supposed to be the daughter of Mrs. Lucinda Grant. The sixth body was that of a colored woman not yet known. It is said to-night that the total number of bodies so far recovered is 80, although not over 20 have been identified. Another steamer went down this evening and is expected back to-morrow with more bodies. Many of those recovered to-day have been partially eaten by crabs and were badly disfigured.

The Virginius Question.

WASHINGTON, August 8.—There is only one question connected with the Virginius which is considered of sufficient importance to justify an examination, namely, whether that vessel was about two years ago sold to one of the South American republics, as stated at that time. If so, the Virginius is now sailing under papers of the United States, to which she has no right.

Discussion of the Massachusetts Liquor Law.

WASHINGTON, August 10.—The Sentinel, the organ of the Brewers' Association of the United States, which is published here, makes a very significant statement relative to the trial of fourteen German restaurant keepers in Worcester, Mass., which has just been concluded. It states that these fourteen Germans, every one of whom was in possession of a license for which he had paid the U. S. Government the sum of $20, have been fined in Worcester, Mass., and sent to the House of Correction for six months, and ordered to find $100 bail not to violate the anti-beer law for one year, because they had sold fermented liquor. The Sentinel says Massachusetts takes the fourth rank in the manufacture of fermented liquors among the States, and is only exceeded by New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio. Massachusetts paid last year to the Federal Government $530,250 as tax on malt liquors, and for the first nine months of the present fiscal year $471,[illegible], as against $401,[illegible] for the same time last year. The Government of the United States received for every barrel of beer thus seized or destroyed the sum of $1. The Government officials have continued to collect the Federal tax, and thus indirectly to encourage the manufacturer to break the law. The question now arises: What is the Government to do in Massachusetts? If it is unlawful in Massachusetts to manufacture and sell beer, the Government cannot legally collect taxes, and the money forced out of brewers by Federal officials must be returned to them. If it is proper and just to ruin manufacturers and dealers of fermented liquors, and confiscate their property, it must be right to do the same with the compounders in the manufacture of whisky and [illegible]. If the Federal Government quietly submits to be despoiled of revenue in Massachusetts, it can be despoiled of the same elsewhere.

Miscellaneous.

WASHINGTON, August 11.—The Agricultural Department reports that the probable wheat yield for 1873 will be two hundred and twenty million bushels.

WASHINGTON, August 11.—The supervising inspector of steamboats will commence on Wednesday a full investigation into the burning of the Wawasset on the Potomac. The number of bodies already discovered is 67.

UTAH.

SALT LAKE, August 11.—On Saturday Snow, Attorney-General, moved for an order of the court for a grand jury for the September term. Judge Emerson asked U. S. Attorney Carey if he wished a grand jury. The latter replied that as the Territorial court had already intimated that no jury could be legally empanneled under existing laws, he did not wish to go through the farce of criminal examination, or of trial, simply to have it set aside. Immediately thereafter the court held that the Territorial Legislature had taken the subject from the court and given it to the Clerk, who had nothing to do with it.

The argument in question as to the jurisdiction of the court in the Webb-Young divorce case is completed. The court has reserved the decision.

General Ord is here on an inspecting tour, and proceeds to Beaver.

Parties from the newly discovered mines are arriving daily. Reports speak very highly of the richness of the mines. They are only 65 miles from here—about 30 miles nearer than to any other point on the railroad.

ELKO, August 11.—The mining excitement is unabated. Miners of this State express the utmost confidence in the new district of Cornucopia. New ledges were being unearthed which from present appearances insured the district's being one of the richest of Nevada. The Stage Company's agent gives the exact distance from Elko at sixty-six miles, with a prospect of having the distance shortened five miles within the next few days. About four hundred men are at and near the new diggings. The average number leaving here daily is fifty.

The Elko water ditch is now completed eleven miles, leaving about four miles to be completed.

Parties interested in the narrow gauge road south state that they will commence work next week. But little confidence is placed in the report.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 11.—The trial of eight members of the Hip Yee Tong Society for conspiracy was resumed this afternoon before a jury in the Police Court. Several Chinese witnesses corroborated the testimony of Yet Sing, the man from whom the defendants tried to extort money. The trial will not be concluded to-day. The wife of Yet Sing is a very unwilling witness. She said she dared not tell all for fear that Hip Yee Tong would kill her. She ventured, however, to testify about having been sold to a keeper of a brothel and seeing money [illegible] her price paid to members of the society. Dr. Locke was sworn, but before he testified the court adjourned.

After an angry [illegible] the motion was lost and the whole subject matter was laid on the table. The [illegible] then adjourned. The Convention of that body called the [illegible] Gates was chosen temporary Chairman and the Secretary of the County Committee was invited to remain [illegible]. A [illegible] lobby was carried against the protest of several that the proceedings ought to be open and above board. Much had been said about the railroad company having [illegible] of the matter. They want the public to know all that might be said on the subject. A little girl escaped from the house and gave the alarm, whereupon Sheriff Edgar succeeded in capturing the villains and lodged them in jail.

AUNT SALLY

WHY SHE NEVER MARRIED

The Providence Journal is responsible for the following:

Now, Aunt Sally, do please tell us why you never got married. You remember you said once that when you were a girl you were engaged to a minister, and promised us you would tell us about it some time. Now, aunt, please tell us.

Well, you see, when I was about seventeen years old, I was living at Utica, in the State of New York. Though I may say it myself, I was quite a good looking girl then, and had several beaux. The one that took my fancy was a young minister, a very promising young man, and remarkably pious and steady. He thought a good deal of me, and I kind of took a fancy to him, and things went on until we were engaged. One evening he came to me and puts his arms around me, and kind of hugged me, when I got excited and some flustered. It was a long time ago, and I don't know but what I hugged back a little. I was like any other girl, and pretty soon I pretended to be mad about it, and pushed him away, though I wasn't mad a bit. You must know the house where I lived was on one of the back streets of the town. There were glass doors in the parlor which open over the street. These doors were drawn to. I stepped back a little from him, and when he came up close I pushed him back again. I pushed him harder than I intended to, and don't you think, girls, the poor fellow lost his balance and fell through one of the doors into the street.

"Oh, Aunty! Was he killed?"

"No, he fell head first, and as he was going I caught him by the leg of his trowsers. I held on for a moment, and tried to pull him back, but his suspenders gave way, and the poor young man fell clear out of his [illegible] into a parcel of ladies and gentlemen in the street."

"Oh, Aunty! [illegible]"

"There, that's right, squall [illegible] as much as you want to. Girls that can't hear a little thing like that without tearing around the room and [illegible] in such a way don't know enough to come in when it rains. A [illegible] will [illegible] anything again."

"But, Aunt Sally, what became of him? [illegible]"

[illegible] That, girls, is the reason why I never married. I felt very bad about it [illegible] very happy [illegible] way."

LETTER FROM BOSTON

THE WEATHER—[illegible]—THE FOURTH OF JULY—AN [illegible]

[From our Special Correspondent.]

BOSTON, July [illegible], 1873.

The weather up to this date has been quite comfortable for this part of the world. People over here are so liable to experience heated periods—such as we had when I was in Washington City in 1866, and such as they have had several times since, when a man had to carry a wet handkerchief in his hat and take frequent drinks of ice water during the day to keep alive, when he had to wash every night in cold water before lying down, to be then actually burnt by the bed clothes, and almost stifled for want of a breath of air—when men and animals fell on all the streets of these great cities, fatally stricken with blinding and insufferable heat reflected everywhere from pavements under foot and walls of brick or adamant towering far above his head on either side—were fearing a hot summer, and predicting it, when I reached Boston. Why is it that people everywhere are as prone to predict evil of [illegible] as are the sparks to fly upward? Is this dread of ills in the way—of something awful just ahead—an instinct wisely lodged in the back side of a man's head, to induce him, as well as the beaver, to look out for floods and prepare for winter? or is it merely the voice of excessive caution, bountifully given to such as are deficient in intellect and lacking in hope? I incline to the latter opinion, having for twenty-five years noticed that many Oregonians are proverbial for always predicting a hard winter ahead, and equally proverbial for acting just as though they expected it to be rather an unusually mild one. I have seen an average specimen of this school of prophets of evil who could sit on a fence and consume an hour in recounting evidences he had noticed of a hard winter ahead, while his barn loft was nearly [illegible], and his enormous pile of bright, beautiful straw down in the field was all ablaze, and making the stubble field much more luminous than was the owner's intellect.

The hot weather hasn't come—only semi-occasionally. We have had but about six days of uncomfortable heat, and then only one day when the mercury went up to 90 deg. That was a swelterer. It seemed ten fold more insufferable to me than a day in Oregon when the mercury indicated 104 deg. If I had ever felt such a day in Oregon I should have been tempted to consult a medium to know whether the spirit of Nebuchadnezzar hadn't come back, and ordered the furnace to be made seven times hotter "than it was wont to be heated," to burn up our good people, who all, or nearly all, are known to be Shadrachs, Meshachs and Abednegos in unflinching devotion to some "great principle"—generally political or theological. Spirits are said to feel much as they did when incarnate. They want to drink whisky, squeeze the hand of beauty, and play about the same pranks generally they were so possessed to play here. If so, let Nebuchadnezzar be assured, let him order no kindling wood for the furnace—that is, if he is bent on destroying any of the "great principles" of our day. They die out fast enough of themselves, or get on the track and are run over and crushed to death by the car of Progress. Where is my "great principle" of "squatter sovereignty," which our boys will remember as having once been set up as a god and worshiped by two million voters, who swung their hats, cheered, and shouted till they cried, when they saw the thing elevated on a pole and carried through the streets at the head of a procession of office seekers? It gave up the ghost out in Illinois as its bones cracked, and the blood spurted from its bruises, under the heavy tread of a "rail maker." Where is that other "great principle," "the divine right of property in man," venerated by strong races for six thousand years, and which finally expired amid a flash of arms that shook a continent and draped a million doors in mourning? Where are those "great principles" that inspired the men who dragged Michael Servetus to the stake, that instigated the massacre of the Waldenses, and sent up a cry of suffering from tortured innocence, rattling chains in a thousand inquisitorial dungeons, or dragged to the stake to be roasted before a jeering crowd, the tender mercies of whose god was cruelty?

"Great principles," like successive classes of vegetables and species of animals in the world's history, are passing away. The antiquarian only knows of them in fossil remains, and many long ages after this, the moral philosopher, the spiritual geologist of the coming race, will break the historic layers of hardened strata and find everywhere fossil remains of "great principles," some of which will as much astonish them as the discovery of the Sivathere, an animal of the shape of an elephant, with his trunk and four horns, two like those of an ox, and two like those of an antelope—astonished the world when it was dug up in India. These museums will have on exhibition specimens of "my great principle," and many others, with perhaps paintings representing the characters of the gods of former ages, all much wondered at by the youth of that age.

I see you had a general Fourth of July celebration in Oregon. We had one in Boston. It was a very warm day, but people here are always jolly in hot weather if they can only get away from work. There was a great crowd on the Common, lounging around, busy doing nothing. There was nothing of interest transpired except the delivery of the Oration by John [illegible] W[illegible], a Unitarian clergyman. While Alger is small of stature, W[illegible] is rather above the medium size. [illegible] Now, I did wish that he could have had from it hence every man and woman in the United States. His were not the utterances of a little [illegible] seeker. He met the demands of the hour with [illegible] we have [illegible] statesmen [illegible]. I wish you had space to print the [illegible] for your readers. [illegible] I give you a few samples of his talk, and I hope all your readers will read [illegible] afterward. [illegible] But let me introduce Mr. W[illegible]:

[illegible] we stand at the [illegible] best of all peoples [illegible] privileges in the manhood we may look upon [illegible] all that was characteristic of [illegible] through by it what [illegible] and policy we would have [illegible] the country [illegible] more than laws [illegible] more than the principles they [illegible] was the integrity they were [illegible] their best gift to us. One of the prominent writers in England says that Christianity starts from the unbounded admiration of a person, and that all true moral progress is made through admiration.

It is unfortunate to have the admirable persons of our ancestors before us, though we have not lifted [illegible] point that [illegible]. That we are a mighty people is reiterated to us from every Senate chamber and every stump, at every civic and political gathering. But the Republic, no more than anything else, is stronger than its weakest part. And our weakest part is not our international policy, our system of government, our internal differences [illegible] questions of revenue, currency, labor. It is the mind [illegible] underlying thrift and energy, society and church and law. Side by side with every material prosperity there has been growing a laxity of individual [illegible] competition, love of the hazards of money and of power, a moral enervation [illegible] which [illegible] the surface in all dealings, personal and national, and are got to be recognized as the characteristics of the American man. We have not gone on with the steadfastness of our ancestry, building up an honorable life, without we [illegible] leaving out the honorable things, have grasped for those which satisfy a low and personal ambition. There was a chance under the inspirations of the past, under the culture of our institutions, to have built a broad and recognized and honored American character, and there is chance yet, if forsaking the way in which we have gone too far, we will take the backward step and build anew from our fathers' foundations the fabric of American manhood. * * * These are the dull and enervating days of peace, and to the excitements of war have succeeded those of commercial prosperity. We have resumed the ways and arts of peace, and we have resumed its neglects. We are settled down as if the war had settled all outstanding questions, and there was nothing for us to do but to pursue the way marked by our ambitions. We speak of danger as passed, as if danger were only that which the bayonet could face and the shell dissipate, as if rebellions against morality were not as disastrous as rebellions against law, as if the worst wounds were not the wounds we give ourselves, and suicide the meanest of all deaths. The perils of the Republic are not all passed. I am not one of those who think that permanence and prosperity were secured through the strife, because permanence and prosperity are made of other stuff. It did not cure it, did not probe it, did not reach the worst disease of the body politic. Though we have closed up that struggle and voted to call ourselves a free and united and happy people, though the old stars and stripes to-day float everywhere, and the other ensign is forgotten, though politicians have shaken hands across a bloody chasm, and Confederates living have placed flowers above the graves of Federal dead, the Republic has not passed the point of peril. Peace came to us too soon. The greatest of war's lessons had not been learned. We came from the contest braggart, self-mastered not at all, our own part in it exaggerated, God's part overlooked. Back to the old ways we went, forward to new careers with a maddened speed, goading ourselves where already there was no need of spur. Everything was inflated, ourselves most of all. Everything in excess—no balance, no repose, no foresight, everything under pressure, and one sees no human way out of it except by convulsion, which shall shake not Government, perhaps not finance, not commerce, manufactures, trade alone, but worse and more, that of which we may already count the foreshadows—man's faith in man, in himself, in the very fact of a higher moral law. Consulting the outside of prosperity, one cannot deny the mighty stride of the Republic, day by day and while men sleep. Looking only at industry and resource and thrift and material success, it all seems well, too bright to fade. But clouds are in the horizon, and their mutter reaches the ear that is wise to hear. There are conditions about us that cannot continue. Of no time since the formation of the Republic may it be more truly said that all its best is past, its promise is at hazard. What the press tells us from day to day, of plans and deeds, of policies and politics, of contrivance and connivance, of the clash of interests that are local and selfish with rights that are broad and universal, gives us not the sup of horror, but the full meal of despair. There would seem nothing that is not in process of decay. Either these are the most atrocious libels that follow up and fix upon the men of politics and of traffic, or they are to the core morally unsound; either the land is given over to a reprobate tongue, or the men of it of all classes and occupations are fatally corrupt. The war we have had was not, after all, the test and strain of institution and of government. In these peace days it is that strain and test come. In these that is the nation's trial, of what sort it is. In these that the question is to be settled of national advance, national perpetuity, national integrity. What of readjustment it demanded, what of reconstruction it necessitates, is quite as much needed here as elsewhere, North or South. While we are thinking of legislating for, complaining about the still malcontent, a graver duty lies nearer home. The reconstruction this day needs is not that of once rebellious States, is not a question of local or national policy, is not a thing for force, for law, for enactment, for execution. It is reconstructed selves that is demanded—a more conscientious, consistent, individual manhood. The Republic is not saved, nor can it be so long as everywhere the old unrestrained spirit of self—petulant, aggressive, noisy, in every occasion obtrusive—is itself. He looks very superficially at causes and results who does not know how all life's troubles, civil or personal, spring from the self in man. As the years drift us away from the point of strife, and prosperity, with its cares and deceits, demands us, I cannot feel that the Republic is secure, because I do not find that quality of manhood which must underlie the nation as it should underlie the man. Ours is the dull time of the patriot's existence, but that does not excuse us from the patriot's duties. It is no time to give over a patriot's cares. The patriot spirit does not wait occasion, does not slowly [illegible] at the last utterance of peril. It does not need to be perpetually fired, but is itself a fire. It is not a meteor-flash, but a steady, self-feeding flame; it is not a momentary effusion, but a life. The patriot is a sober man, anxious, thoughtful, faithful in service, alive to the least and humblest duty as a man or citizen, sturdy and steady under dull routine, resolved that through him the Republic receive no harm. Only as I can put an honest manhood in, am I in any way a patriot. Not feats of arms, no gift of moneys, no imprisonment in Libbeys, no eloquence—no, not death—make men patriots. These are cheap. They are of impulse, of excitement, or of necessity; they strike and act from nerve and not the soul. The calm and steady life, true to noblest instinct and loftiest example, ready in duty as in danger, under tame and weary toil as under excited pressure, to do as to die, that makes the patriot as it makes the man. Washington, Putnam, Greene are not alone our patriots; the men who died in State street or on Bunker Hill, who fell at Gettysburg or saw the last of the rebellion at Richmond, who lie beneath the turf of ten thousand graves, or who live to flower-strew their memories. But the men in all the land, north, south, east, west—the men of toil, the men of scholarship, the men of wealth who live devoted in daily to every day principles of right and honor and truth. To whatever of personal reconstruction is needed such a man will bend himself, not against it by its difficulty, but stimulated by its necessity. In it will he know no pause till out of himself shall be taken everything low and mean, and he shall be worthy to support his country, to be the defender of its liberty. [illegible] We, the sovereign people, must be morally up[illegible]

[illegible] the trust the people repose in [illegible] Politics is a noble science, but party intrigue and chicane threaten the very life of the Republic. These [illegible] all our responsible places and rule our principles from custom house to school committee. The great interests of the Republic must not and cannot remain at the mercy of partisan [illegible]. We [illegible] men into office who flatter us by calling them [illegible] servants [illegible]. We keep its name [illegible] but there is no tyranny on God's earth so galling, so debasing, so fraught with mischief as the tyranny that the moral welfare of the American people has placed in the hands of the American [illegible]. If we will not break it, it must recoil upon us, or what is worse infinitely, upon our children. [illegible] Better without it. Has it come to this, that Americans can undertake nothing without a scandal [illegible] Vienna Exposition [illegible] Freedmen's Bureau, Pacific Railway, Presidential campaign [illegible] Washington [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] in the grasping consolidation and defiance of railways, the nullifying of deliberate enactments, permissions of some [illegible] which may go on to permit evils more fatal. These are not merely [illegible] phases of a busy life carelessly absorbed. They are indications of a spirit which strikes at the life of the Republic. They are not convulsions of vast and shocks of credit and movements of interest, and [illegible] of reckless men, but deeper than that they tell of badness at heart, badness in the men, and equal badness in you and me for letting them be where they are, in doing such things. It is not that men in these relations and with these opportunities are above all or peculiarly sinners. These but express through their opportunity the lack that lies in us all. The sin is that the individual American has lost that fine penetrating sense of honor and fidelity and self control and truth, that keen moral sentiment that distinguished the fathers, and at a time when men worshiped thrones and kings made of them the leading power of the globe. More unqualifiedly than Taine puts it of the England of to-day as compared with the England of Cromwell, may it be said of our to-day America as compared with that of our fathers: "We no longer look on life as an august temple, but as a machine for solid profits or a hall for refined amusements. We have our rich, our working classes, our bankers who preach the gospel of gold; we have gentlemen, fine dandies who preach the gospel of manners. We over work ourselves to heap up the guineas, or else we make ourselves insipid to attain an elegant dignity. Our hell is no longer, as under Cromwell, the dread of being found guilty before a just judge, but the dread of making a bad speculation or of transgressing etiquette. We have lost the mainspring of action." To have lost moral conviction is indeed to have lost the mainspring of action. Is it not that to which the American public seems to be coming? Parry or shield it as we may, is it not that to which the American individual has lapsed? The American reputation cannot long stand the strain, much less the American character. It is the Republic that suffers. The historian Froude has said: "It would be well if there were some definition of freedom which would enable men to see clearly what they mean and what they do not mean by that vaguest of words;" and elsewhere he says, "The entire fabric of human experience is woven of the double threads of freedom and authority, which are forever [illegible] one against the other." In that they knew this, the men of the elder Republic are distinguished from the men of the later. They had just emerged from a conflict that taught them the self limitings of freedom—had been face to face with perils from which they learned self respect as self restraint. The power they grew to have over themselves they threw into their Government, and there presided over the birth of the new nation a spirit of moderation and of health which gives to its earlier days the characteristics of an individual rather than of a people. There is balance, confidence, foresight; consideration in all things planned, undertaken; and the Republic moves to its place among the countries of the globe as steadily as buoyantly, as the well ballasted hull glides from the stocks to its place among navies. Time and the security of success have largely lost us the ancestral idea of liberty. It will not occur to the true chronicler of our time to speak of the balance of the Republic to-day. Not liberty under the law, but liberty above law, is our popular idea. And this not the legitimate result of our institutions. Republicanism does not tend to anarchy. It is no synonym for license. There may be lesser causes: the reaction from a too strict religion, the enervation of continued success, the rise and struggle between various commercial interests, the relaxing of the rule of home; but the cause behind all other causes is that the man has lost the thought of himself as primarily a moral being, and has given himself to the control of things over which he should have kept the mastery. That Republic of to-day reflects its children as that of the fathers did its founders. To shield, to save the Republic, we must reach a new conviction. You and I, and all America's sons, have got to realize that we hold not the liberty of our own souls in our own keeping, or the liberty of individual millions, but the destiny of an [illegible]. The man must go to work upon himself, the unit of power, the unit of safety. He may not stoop from loftiest principle, because he so endangers the integrity of the whole. The [illegible] and integrity of liberty, throwing aside all policy of party, of sect or of self, turning his back upon the wild and lawless pursuit of pleasure, self-indulgence, ambition, shaking himself clear of the encumbering things of mistaken self interest, must [illegible] the restraining of a higher law, must he seek that moral manhood which, as it was the creation of the Republic, so shall it be its only safety.

FOOTE ON CHASE AND LINCOLN.

In his "Reminiscences of the Past," now in course of publication in the Washington Chronicle, ex-Senator Foote says:

It is not even possible that I should [illegible] to reflect in the least degree upon the public or private character of President Lincoln or Judge Chase. I have long regarded the former of these personages as one of the purest, [illegible] and most successful statesmen that the country has produced, and have declared the opinion that his untimely death was one of the most calamitous events that has marked our history as a people. I am firmly persuaded that had he been allowed to live four years longer the Republic would have been saved from most of the evils which have been since so unhappily experienced, and I have on all occasions, even in the bosom of the South, avowed the conviction which I felt that his noble inaugural address of March 1861, read by the light of subsequent experience, is, upon the whole, one of the most sublime declarations of principle that has ever emanated from any uninspired human being. In regard to Chief Justice Chase I can say, with absolute sincerity, that I loved and honored him much when living, and that I deeply deplored his death. I have never spoken of him otherwise than as a high minded and incorruptible patriot while he was yet among us, and now that he is in the tomb nothing shall provoke me to speak of him otherwise. His fairly earned laurels I should be the last to tarnish, were it in my power to do so. I have yet, though, to be made to understand how his fame can suffer detriment from the statement that he lived and died a Democrat in creed, and that he was in favor of enforcing all the "reserved rights of the States and people" in every legitimate mode. Nor can I see how he is to suffer in the public estimation by having it understood as widely as possible that he always regarded the fugitive-slave law as unconstitutional; that for many years he struggled in the courts of Ohio to defeat its operation; that he sternly opposed the re-enactment of that law in 1850, and that he considered it a disgrace to the sovereign State over which he presided to allow this law to be enforced among her citizens.

A JOLLY CONVENTION

Telegraphic reports of the Lynchburg (Va.) State Convention introduce Mr. Seaton, of Alexandria, in the following remarks:

There are men in this convention—white men with black men—to buy those up who have no more interest in the State of Virginia than a hog. [Laughter.] I am standing up for my constituents and am interrupted by white and black men. I believe them all carpet-baggers. [Laughter.] It's choke him down when you don't agree with him. The Chair suggested Mr. Seaton to confine himself to the subject under discussion. [A voice, "Give him latitude."]

Mr. Seaton. No, I don't want latitude, but you want common sense, as Shakspeare said on one occasion. [Uproarious laughter.]

Mr. Seaton, continuing, attempted to repeat "As Shakspeare said on one occasion—" but the laughter drowned his voice, and he was unable to tell what Shakspeare said: "There's a tide in the affairs of men," etc.

Mr. Anderson, of Louisa county, to Mr. Seaton: The convention has seen enough. You had better speak to the point, and not keep saying "As Shakspeare said on one occasion." [Great laughter.]

Mr. Seaton. If I were as big a jackass as you, the convention wouldn't have any fun. [Uproarious laughter.]

Lindsay made one of his characteristic speeches. They tried to make him sit down, but he would not give way.

Frank Moss, colored, of Buckingham county, attempted to speak out of order, and confusion worse confounded was the result.

The old bell on the Court House at Barnstable, Mass., is worn out, and a new one fills its place. It bears date 167[illegible], and the Patriot says it bears an inscription evidently intended for "Deus pro nobis quis contra—If God be for us, who can be against us?" But the workman, who was probably a better moulder than scholar, made it read "De[illegible] Pro[illegible] bos Quis [illegible]." The ancient bell was preserved in the Court House.

The Chicago Times does not take kindly to the name "Liberal Democracy," suggested by Mr. Groesbeck for a new organization. It says the name is a very bad one; could hardly be worse. It is doubly bad, suggesting as it does two offensive reminiscences of political rascality, when even one would be too much.

The delegates were instructed to advocate the [illegible] of J. H. [illegible], but were not pledged to anybody. A. H. Brown was Chairman of the Convention.

THE RAILWAY PROBLEM.

The St. Paul Press, one of the best papers in the northwest, in its issue of the 1st instant, has a lengthy discussion of the railway problem. The scheme of adjusting tariffs by the Legislatures upon the basis of the actual cost of construction and operation of the roads, as advocated by the Chicago Tribune, the Press thinks would do great injustice to the purchasers of stock in the railway corporations. The Press, therefore, insists upon the position taken by it some time since, that the only way out of the difficulty is for the States, or Government, to build, own and operate their own railways, and fix their own rates of tariff as low as the cost of construction and operation will permit, and by this means compel the private lines to reduce their tariffs accordingly by the mere force of competition. The New York Nation, also one of the most thoughtful papers in the country, in a long article reviewing the plan of the Chicago Tribune, takes the same view as the Press, urging that the Tribune's plan would be simply confiscation and destruction of the property of persons who have innocently invested money in the stocks of the roads now operating.

With great deference for these two journals, the Nation and the Press, we cannot but think their view of the question is a superficial one. In no legal sense would the plan proposed by the Tribune work any injustice whatever upon stockholders. The supposed injustice arises from the manner in which these railway enterprises have been conducted. The corporations organized to build the roads have issued shares of stock of the aggregate nominal or par value of the road when built, and sometimes double or treble that amount. This stock has been divided up among the members of the corporation, not one of whom has paid a cent into the fund for the construction of the road. This stock represents nothing except the right of the holders to exercise certain privileges in the election of officers of the Company. Then bonds of the corporation are printed, pledging the road and franchises for the repayment after a term of years of the amount of money necessary to build the road, and interest on the same at short intervals. These are put into the market and sold for cash, which is expended in building the road. The road is now completed; but the stockholders have not paid a dollar toward its completion. The only money expended has been that for which the bonds were sold.

The next step in the performance is to fix a rate of freight and passenger tariffs that will pay interest on the bonds, and, [illegible] dividends to the stockholders. The stockholders are thus receiving, in the form of dividends, interest on money they have never invested. So, if the stock issued is just equal to the bonded indebtedness, the road must be so operated as to pay interest upon just twice the cost of its construction; and if, as is frequently the case, the stock is two or three times the bonded debt, then the tariffs must be sufficient to multiply the income accordingly; and all this except the bonds is a fictitious capital.

The stock is now put on the market and passes out of the hands of the original holders, to purchasers who pay for it, as an investment, whatever the dividend-paying capacity of the road will justify. These are the innocent holders whom the Nation and the Press think it would wrong to reduce the tariffs on the roads to a rate that would only pay reasonable profits on the actual cost of the road. It certainly would deprive them of dividends, for what they hold represents no part of the cost; but would they be wronged? They are not innocent purchasers in any proper sense of the phrase. They know they are buying what represents no money in the road when they purchase; and they know moreover that the only value this stock can have is owing solely to the fact that tariffs on the road are so far above what would produce a reasonable return for the capital actually invested, as to enable the company to declare dividends on a large fictitious capital. Their purchase of stock, under the circumstances, is nothing more nor less than paying the original parties for the privilege of standing in their places and receiving interest on money they have never invested. If the destruction of this dividend-paying capacity of the road, through the reduction of rates, is a wrong to such purchasers, it is equally a wrong to the original parties.

But suppose it be said this application of the strict legal definition of an innocent purchaser is too harsh and rigorous, and that the purchasers of stock do stand in a more favorable relation to the question than the original members of the corporation; and that the objection to the proposed plans, on account of the hardship it would work upon them, is well taken; how much better is the plan proposed by the Press and Nation—Government ownership and competition. If the Government build competing lines of road, and operate them at rates that will barely net the interest on the cost of construction, these private lines must come down to the same rates or lose all their business. This would destroy the value of the stock just the same as the other plan. If it is wrong to do that directly, how is it right to do it indirectly? The plan of Government ownership may obviate technical and legal objections, but if the case is to rest on moral grounds, where these two journals put it, their plan utterly fails to solve the problem.

A NEW STATE.

Some time since we called attention to a dispatch from Jackson, Tennessee, which stated that a convention was in session at that city, the object of which was to discuss the formation of the new State of Nebraska. At that time the dispatch was considered unintelligible. The difficulty, however, was no doubt wholly in consequence of a mistake of the operator of the telegraph at some point in the transmission of the dispatch, in getting Nebraska mixed with the Tennessee convention. The following, which we find in an Eastern exchange, dated at Jackson, July 29th, explains the matter:

> A convention formed of delegates from portions of North Mississippi, West Tennessee and Western Kentucky, interested in the movement looking to the formation of a new State out of these fractions, assembled here this morning and organized by the appointment of Major R. B. Hurt, of Tennessee, as temporary chairman, and of a committee of three from each State to report permanent officers for the convention, after which it adjourned.

The three States out of which it is proposed to carve the new Commonwealth, do not embrace a large area of territory when compared with the other Mississippi valley States. They are larger than the New England communities, it is true; but the accidents which divided New England into so many small States, have not affected the West, and the policy of the Government and people has been rather to make large States than small ones. The only feasible line for the eastern boundary of any State that could be carved out of the three States mentioned would deprive Tennessee and probably Kentucky of any outlet to the Mississippi river. It is scarcely likely that the rich, populous district of Middle Tennessee would relish that idea. The only beneficial result of this proposed division of territory that at first suggests itself is, that it would make Memphis the Capital of something, which it has long wanted to be. It would also make room for two more U. S. Senators.

SOME DISGUSTED DEMOCRATS.

The Democracy of California, if their proceedings in San Francisco may be taken as an indication of the general condition of the organization throughout the State, are about as badly demoralized as their most ardent opposers could desire. Their convention is charged by the rank and file with corruption and fraud, and with having been manipulated in the interest of the Central Pacific Railway Company. At this the great unbought are magnificently indignant, and are holding meetings to protest against it. Meanwhile the more important question stares them in the face, What is to be done with the ticket nominated? It is a small thing to issue an "indignant protest" against the manipulation of the convention so as to secure the nomination of candidates for the Legislature who will serve a corporation instead of the people, if this is to be the end of the matter. The best way for the disgusted Democrats to make their protest effectual, is to refuse to ratify at the polls the fraud of their leaders. The Republican party of San Francisco have placed themselves before the public in their true character as the friends of the people, and have declared [illegible] all manner of dictation from interested combinations of capital. They, therefore, offer these indignant Democrats an excellent opportunity to prove their professions by their votes, and at the same time to teach those who assume leadership that they can lead only so long as they lead in the path of right and justice.

Considerably over a hundred farmers of Washington county have united in a request to the Oregon Central Railway Company to have a side track and regular freight station put in at Hillsboro. The leaving this town out of the list of stations was a wrong to the people of the vicinity, in the first place, and its injustice has been repeatedly recognized by promises from those in authority in the Company to give the town a station—promises that have been broken as often as made. It is to be hoped this appeal will be heeded, and that the good people of Hillsboro and vicinity will be no longer trifled with. The private speculations of a county politician ought not to be weighed against the convenience of a large community, nor should the personal pique of a railway manager be allowed to deprive the people of a great convenience and the Company of a large revenue.

A farmer writes us from Lane county that the Order of Patrons of Husbandry is increasing rapidly in that county, and that nearly all the farmers are joining the order. This movement will sweep Oregon as it has swept the States beyond the Rocky Mountains. As the farmers come to understand its principles and workings, they become better pleased with it. Instead of a narrow and fanatical organization, as some represented it when it was started, they find it practical and liberal in views and purposes, and designed to foster and protect the best interests of the whole community.

One profession (says Punch) is safe from the invasion of woman. She may enter the army, but it is impossible that she can man the navy.

THE FOLLOWING TESTIMONIAL

Of leading citizens of Oregon, resident in Salem, attest their appreciation of the wonderful success of Col. Reed's conscientious labors:

SALEM, Oregon, August 9, 1873.

E. D. TOWT, Esq.—Dear Sir: Having had the pleasure of witnessing the panoramic views of scenes in Washington Territory, Oregon and California which were painted by Col. C. A. Reed, of Salem, and exhibited by yourself on Thursday night last (Aug. 7), at the Opera House in this city, we feel it is due to you to say that having visited a great portion of the places represented by the painting we find them true to nature, and such accurate representations of the reality, that they are recognized at once. We cannot speak in terms too commendatory of the manner in which the paintings are executed. No description with pen or tongue can more than approximate to their real merit, nothing short of an actual view of them can give one an adequate idea of their real excellence. No person having a desire to see the important places you have selected—many of which are already famous, not only in the history of the Western States, but in that of the Nation—and who is not possessed of the time or means to visit the scenes, ought to allow this opportunity to pass without visiting your exhibition and there learning, for a small sum, what would otherwise cost a long journey and considerable outlay of money. And those who have visited the scenes these paintings represent, will find themselves amply repaid in seeing them upon the canvas to which they have been so skillfully transferred by the master hand of Col. Reed.

As citizens of Oregon we feel disposed to thank you for the zeal you have manifested in thus causing to be represented upon canvas the beauty, grandeur and magnificence of the scenery of our State, so little known abroad, thus drawing the attention of the older States to our great Northwest, in a manner more accurate and impressive than the words of the most skillful historian or eloquent orator. Very respectfully, your ob't servants,

Insure against Loss by Fire in the

Phœnix of Hartford,

BECAUSE:

FIRST—IT HAS COMPLIED FULLY WITH THE Oregon State Law.

SECOND—Its contracts in Oregon are backed under a re-insurance contract, by its own and the united assets of the Home Ins. Co. of New York and the North British and Mercantile Ins. Company of London, aggregating over $44,000,000 00, gold, offering the best security of any Fire Insurance Company or Association in the world.

THIRD—It can carry large risks, as its policies are re-insured by the above mentioned Companies, so that the PHŒNIX alone can carry the same line that all three companies would take separately.

FOURTH—It requires but one set of proofs in case of loss; thus giving the security of three Companies without the trouble of dealing with separate Corporations.

On these solid merits, viz: Capacity to carry the largest risks, the amplest possible security, the simplest adjustment in case of loss, and the prompt and equitable payment of all just claims,

TUESDAY MORNING, AUGUST 1[illegible]

CITY.

[illegible] work for [illegible] Castle Rock [illegible] have made Columbia famous [illegible] will all have their proper place [illegible] Astoria, Oregon City and [illegible]. Perhaps the most attractive scenes [illegible] wherein the famous stronghold of Capt Jack—interior and exterior views [illegible] nation of the Peace Commissioner [illegible] headquarters in Tule Lake are [illegible] with startling exactness. It is said by those who visited these localities during the late Modoc war. The Modoc fortifications take a large scene, 10x12 feet, and convey a vivid idea of their horrid strength. Colonel Reed has spent some seven months in the preparation of this [illegible]. He is known as a conscientious painter, and his name lends strength to the enterprise. We feel assured that our citizens will patronize this production of home talent as liberally as it deserves. The Panorama will [illegible] on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of the present week. It will then be taken East, where it is destined to advertise our State and her magnificent scenery.

MAGNIFICENT COLLECTION.—Last evening [illegible] at the Washington Guard Armory to inspect the collection of splendid oil paintings which will be sold at auction by Mr. A. B. Richardson on Thursday morning. There are 100 magnificent paintings of all dimensions, from the brushes of many of the leading, unrivaled artists of the present day, among which we observe Rosamce, Etterick, Loveridge, Morris, H. Hill, Nilmat, Woverman, Baker, Melrose, Russell, Hassler, Renard, Remington, De Vece, Eberly, Hartz, Mecker, [illegible], Aubry, Garnier, Weanings, Hartwick and many others of note. The collection constitutes one of the largest and most elegant [illegible] paintings which have ever been [illegible] this city. It is questionable whether San Francisco could produce a better gallery. Each picture is richly mounted in heavy gold gilt frames. Among the splendid collection will be found choice landscapes, winter scenes, figures, religious and historical paintings. The sale will commence to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

TORN UP.—At last, after all the items which have been furnished by the reporters in days past, by reason of the projection, laying out and completion of the Park in front of the Clarendon hotel, that chosen plat of ground is to be abandoned to the bats and owls. The filling up of Couch's Lake under the Clarendon Hotel, the subsequent change of grade on First street, and the tearing up of the street railway track has rendered the abolishment of the triangular park one of the imperative necessities in the progress of events. Workmen were engaged yesterday in tearing up the timber and sidewalk, and soon the spot which has long marked the miniature Boulevard with its flowers, green grass and playing fountain will be hidden from the sight of man by "heaps of loose earth." Not even a vestige of this pleasant little oasis will be left to remind one that it ever existed.

GRAND CONCERT.—The committee, consisting of Messrs. C. W. Parrish, H. H. Carpenter and F. Frank, which was appointed by the Relief Committee to co-operate with the musicians of the city in getting up a grand vocal and instrumental concert, the proceeds of which are to be applied to the Relief Fund, are making arrangements as rapidly as possible. Several meetings of the committee and prominent musicians have been held. Yesterday forenoon an adjourned meeting was held at Gray's Music Store to further the project. Arrangements have been effected, and a grand concert determined upon. The concert will be given on Tuesday evening, 19th inst. The concert will be given under the direction of Prof. J. H. Brenner, assisted by Messrs. J. H. Hatch, S. Harris and Geo. L. DePrans. Notice will be timely given and full particulars furnished.

THE RELIEF CONCERT.—Messrs. C. W. Parrish, F. Frank and H. H. Carpenter, who have been appointed as a Committee of Arrangements for the concert to be given in the city on Tuesday evening the 19th inst., for the benefit of the sufferers by the fire, will canvass the city to-day to dispose of tickets for the same. We doubt not that all of our citizens who were so fortunate as to escape will be ready to respond to the solicitations of those gentlemen and purchase tickets.

UNINTENTIONALLY OMITTED.—We are requested to state that the name of Mr. I. M. Richardson was unintentionally omitted from the signatures attached to the circular issued by the Disbursing Committee appointed by the General Relief Committee. Mr. Richardson has been one of the most active members of the committee, and the omission of his name, though purely accidental, was much regretted by the other members of the committee.

THE WORK FINISHED.—Workmen finished putting tin on the dome of the new Custom House yesterday, and the scaffolding was all removed. The dome has all been completed excepting the windows. It is quite [illegible] in its architectural proportions and well calculated to set off to good advantage the whole building.

BUSINESS RESUMED.—D. H. Hendee, photographer, who was one of the losers by the late fire, is now fixed up and ready for action at the same old place—corner of First and Morrison streets. Give him a call. Prices to suit the times.

OUT DOOR SPORTS

The cricket club are getting into [illegible] forthcoming match, which is to take place on the 23d instant, between the married and single eleven.

At Lockwood's Cartons last [illegible] Sunday, the prizes [illegible] were distributed as follows: Mr. H. [illegible] first prize, pipe with cigar stand; Wm. Wesser second prize, rolling 63, two vases with flowers; H. Humel third prize, rolling 62, checker board and [illegible] box; H. W. [illegible] 59, fourth prize, album; F. H. Parrott rolling [illegible], fifth prize, jack knife.

At a special meeting of the [illegible] Club, the subject of getting up a base ball [illegible] was introduced. It was resolved that the Secretary communicate with the [illegible] Club, Monmouth, Forest City and [illegible] Clubs, proposing each club to send delegates to a convention to be held in this city on the 20th inst., when the time and place for holding the tournament, the prizes [illegible] and the arrangements for playing [illegible] [illegible].

On motion the report was accepted and the committee was granted further time.

MISCELLANEOUS

On motion the names of J. N. Dolph, C. M. Carter and Eugene Semple were added to the committee to devise ways and means to [illegible].

Governor Curry moved that Governor [illegible], W. S. Ladd, C. M. Carter, Eugene Semple and J. N. Dolph be appointed to devise a plan of [illegible] for the rebuilding and establishing of business in that part of the city which was destroyed by the fire of August [illegible].

Mr. Curry moved to amend by adding to the list on such committee the name of Gov. L. F. Grover. The amendment was carried. The motion as amended was adopted.

On motion the meeting voted that when it adjourned to do so to meet at the same place on Wednesday evening at half past seven o'clock.

After a request that full reports of the next meeting be given through the press of the city, on motion the meeting adjourned until Wednesday evening at half past seven o'clock.

RELIEF COMMITTEE

An adjourned meeting of the Relief Committee was held last evening at Ladd's bank, W. S. Ladd in the Chair.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

The Committees reported the following additional amounts collected: First Ward $[illegible]; Second Ward $70.

The Chairman reported that contributions had been made as follows: Trinity Church $35.60; First Baptist Church $37.60.

The Committee on the Burnt District reported progress, and asked for further time in which to report.

W. S. Caldwell stated that posters had been prepared showing the addresses of members of the Distributing Committee. He also stated that through inadvertency the name of Mr. I. M. Richardson had been omitted from the posters.

Mr. Caldwell also reported that the Disbursing Committee had held meetings every day. Thus far the total expenditures have reached the sum of seven thousand dollars. The number to whom relief has been afforded, counting each family as one, has been about 90, and there have been about 100 applications, some of which for want of time have not yet been passed upon. The Committee had done all in their power to find sufferers and to relieve their wants at once.

The Secretary was instructed to have the poster and addresses which had been distributed through the city published three days in each of the daily papers.

The Committee on Benefits and Entertainments reported that the proposed concert to come off on the 19th was progressing encouragingly.

A telegram from the firm of Patrick & Co. and a letter from Cleveland, both of San Francisco, were read and placed on file.

A letter was also read from Hon. F. W. Dixon, of Marion county, offering assistance in behalf of the farmers of that county.

A letter from Mayor Alvord, of San Francisco, was read offering aid if desired.

The letters were placed on file, and Mayor Failing requested to answer in the usual form.

Mr. Moses Hurd offered to furnish vegetables from his farm at [illegible] if the committee will furnish a place for distribution. The matter was referred to the Ladies' Relief Society.

The Secretary was instructed to issue a call in the evening paper of Thursday and the morning papers of Friday for a meeting on the evening of that day.

On motion the Committee adjourned.

RELIEF

The Committee for distributing aid to sufferers by the late fire, [illegible] that all persons needing food, shelter, clothing, tools or other assistance for immediate relief, or to enable them to support themselves and families, will make their wants known.

A rural correspondent of the [illegible] in describing a belle of the occasion, says she wore a snow white dress, embroidered with pink, which was in harmony with her jolly, good nature. [illegible] good natured harmony is a desirable quality.

A New York Herald correspondent has seen in Florida a spider that would weigh three or four pounds. We have often seen one as heavy as this in our kitchen. What skillet takes to get up such stories?—Lowell Courier.

The married ladies of a Western city have formed a "Come home husband Club." It is about four feet long and has a brush on the end of it.

Hurgren & Shindler have reopened in their former warehouse, the Lutheran Church, Fifth street, near the U. S. Custom House, where they will operate till a permanent business place is ready. They are prepared to fill orders for furniture and all kinds of bedding, including first class hair mattresses and the celebrated woven wire mattress, children's perambulators, &c., &c. Being desirous of settling up their affairs speedily, any one indebted to this firm is requested to call and give them the use of their means.

Why linger in blissful ignorance? Why do you wander about seeking a place where they keep the largest and finest stock of Summer Clothing? Why pay high prices for goods when the fact has been long established that the great firm of J. KOHN & Co., 91 Front Street, sell Clothing and Gents' Furnishing Goods so cheap? They keep the best, they sell the cheapest, and what more can be asked?

Some people may become excited over the [illegible] of the Northern Pacific Railroad on Puget Sound, but it does not disturb Beck & Waldman, corner Front and Washington streets, in the least. At their [illegible] to their [illegible] at prices which will enable those with limited means to provide themselves with good clothing at a very small outlay. THE UNIVERSAL EXHIBITION

Trial of Mowers and Reapers

[illegible] AMERICAN [illegible] REAPERS AN [illegible] AMERICAN MOWERS [illegible] PETE

Vienna [illegible] N Y Tr[illegible]

VIENNA [illegible] 10 [illegible] Exhibition may be pardoned for feeling jubilant over [illegible] mistakes, disappointments, failures and [illegible] the Agricultural Hall [illegible] that the apparent super[illegible] English had [illegible] our reapers, [illegible] machines made for show [illegible] enough for hard [illegible] the working [illegible] by steam for six weeks in their hall, to show the play of [illegible] the rakes. When it came to the competitive trial in the grain field however neither French nor English could be found. [illegible] pitiful excuses about the great expense of the trial—the only expense being the [illegible] and of two or three men. Now the proof of a reaper is in the reaping, and of a mower in the mowing—at least that is our American rule. The English and French appear to think otherwise and will no doubt go on talking about the superiority of their machines until the end of the Fair [illegible] failure to appear at the trial yesterday. A single German firm was on hand with three reapers and a Vienna reaper and mower con[illegible]ted. All the other machines were American.

The trial took place on the flat, sultry Danube plain about an hour['s ride] [illegible]ward from the city, and almost in sight of the battle-field of Wagram. No doubt the French and Austrians column[s] trumped over the ground if they did fight upon it. Here is a chance for some poetic preacher to point a moral on the progress of civilization. The day was the hottest of the season, and the black dirt of the plain absorbed and held the heat like a stone. The color and richness of the soil and the monotonous flatness of the country reminded some Americans of an Illinois prairie, others found resemblances to the valleys of the Sacramento and the San Joaquin in California. There were of course no fences or any division of the fields by hedge or ditch. The roads were bordered by poplar trees or American cottonwoods naturalized here for their rapid growing quality. By standing on the railway embankment we could see half a dozen villages scattered over the plain. Ranges of low, misty mountains bounded the prospect on the north and west. The estate embraced two or three square miles of land, I should say, and the fields stretched out from the chateau and village on one side like segments of a half circle. After a tedious delay the reapers were set at work about 11 o'clock. The grain was rye, tolerably stout, and thick in one part of the field, but small and thin in another. The heads were poorly filled and the kernels small. The field had been divided into sections of an Austrian Joch of land each—about an acre and a half. Every machine had its section to cut. All the sections abutted upon a pasture, so that the machines all started in line, the line being over half a mile long. They drew lots for position and went to work at about the same time, in the following order from south to north:

1 Johnson Harvester—made by Johnson Harvester Company, Brockport, N Y
2 Buckeye Reaper—Adriance, Platt & Co, New York
3 Johnson Combined Reaper and Mower—Johnson Harvester Company, Brockport, N Y
4 The Wood Reaper—Walter A Wood, Hoosic Falls, N Y
5 The Hoffher Reaper—A Vienna machine
6 Kirby Combined Reaper and Mower—D M Osborne & Co, Auburn, N Y
7 Burdick Reaper—D M Osborne & Co, Auburn, N Y
8 Hubbard Combined—Hubbard Agricultural Works, Rochester, N Y
9 Wood's Reaper (new automatic chain rake)—Walter A Wood, Hoosic Falls, N Y
10 W Siedersleben & Co's Reaper—Anhalt, Germany
11 Excelsior Combined—J F Sieberling & Co, Akron, Ohio
12 and 13 Two German machines, same makers as No 10
14 Buckeye Revolving Rake—Aultman, Miller & Co, Akron, Ohio
15 McCormick Combined—McCormick & Bros, Chicago
16 Buckeye Senior (Table Rake)—Aultman, Miller & Co, Akron, Ohio
17 Kirby Reaper—D M Osborne & Co, Auburn, N Y
18 Champion Combined—Warden, Mitchell & Co, Springfield, Ohio

The arrangements were very bad—there was no programme, no system. There appeared to be no rule about the number of men who should accompany a machine. Some machines were worked by a single man while others had a man in the seat, another driving, or leading the horses, and two or three more walking beside it, punching the animals with their umbrellas and pulling out the straw when the knives got clogged. Most of the teams were unused to the work and gave a good deal of trouble. Some were immense powerful stallions and others wretched raw-boned beasts that could scarcely pull the machines. Then the grain differed greatly in different parts of the field. So the trial with the conditions so unequal, was no test as far as speed was concerned. All the American machines did good work, except one of Wood's which broke down at the start—through no fault of the machine, but through the stupidity of the driver—and did not cut the section assigned to it. The Austrian reaper also worked well and was among the first to complete its task. The German machines were too heavy for the horses. One of them broke down and was left in the field. The other two were the last out. The Johnson Reaper was the first out, cutting its Joch in [illegible] minutes, the Buckeye Senior second in 58 minutes, the Johnson Combined came third in 1 h[illegible] and five minutes later the Wood and three or four others were through. The rest of the Americans followed close after. The arrangements were so stupidly defective that it was almost impossible to get the time of any reaper except from personal observations, which could not extend over the whole field. After the trial followed an interim of two hours for lunch. There was a tent for the jury [illegible] for the general public who were hungry enough to pay a high price for warm beer and [illegible] wiches, and a third where the Buckeye agents spread a hospitable table [illegible] their [illegible] trymen. Then we [illegible] across the lots in country wagons to the mowing ground, which was no meadow but a field of vetch cultivated for green fodder. This plant looks as if [illegible] tried hard to be [illegible] and failed. It [illegible] stem and is much easier to cut than grass, I should say. The Joch sections were marked out as in the grain and the [illegible] took up their positions in [illegible] order:

1 Kirby Mower, Auburn, N Y
2 Johnson Mower, Brockport, N Y
3 Hoffher Mower, [illegible]
4 Champion Mower, Springfield, Ohio
5 Superior Mower, Whit[illegible], West V[illegible]
6 Buckeye New Model Mower, [illegible] N Y [illegible]
7 Buckeye Senior, Akron, O[illegible]
8 Wood Mower, Hoosic Falls, N Y
9 Kirby Combined, Auburn, N Y
10 McCormick Combined, Chicago, Ill
11 Hubbard Combined, [illegible]
12 [illegible]
13 Buckeye Combined, Akron, O[illegible]
14 [illegible]
15 [illegible]

[illegible] the reaper trial [illegible] the mowers [illegible] Johnston and Superior [illegible] first to finish their work [illegible] number of [illegible] American [illegible] in the trial will [illegible] Buckeye Senior [illegible]

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

Financial

[illegible] Aug [illegible]

[illegible]

About twelve months [ha]s elapsed since we first [illegible] of a stringency [illegible] local finances [illegible] from almost every line of trade, manufacture and production. Hard [times have] been the topic of conversation on the [illegible] in the columns of the press. Naturally enough we have [illegible] infallible [illegible] the [illegible] facts have rather been confused than explained. The [illegible] of San Francisco is correct in saying that [illegible] the [illegible] been steadily working [illegible] There are those who [illegible] immigration [illegible] alone and look forward to cessation as their hope. There are others who would have us believe that we are now being justly punished for [illegible] with regard to [illegible] who propose an immediate financial millennium to be brought about by simply adopting greenbacks and the national banking system, forgetting what a chaos of fluctuating values would follow the attempt. An indefinite number of points like these might be enumerated, but, passing to the consideration of actual causes of the present [illegible] we note the first, the want of capital, as the prominent and important need of the times on this coast. While large amounts of money [illegible] there is less capital per capita than in many other of the older States. Though the coast has in the last twenty years produced such an enormous quantity of the precious metals, yet but a small portion of it comparatively has been [kept] for ourselves. Of late the treasure shipments to the East from San Francisco have even exceeded the production on the whole coast. We need capital to develop our mines, to [illegible] our crops and for many purposes, but above all to build up our manufactures. Here is where we lose most. By exporting raw material to the East and to Europe to be returned again in the shape of finished products we are annually paying an army of transporters, middlemen and outside manufacturers an amount which is none the less appreciable because it cannot be precisely stated. All this goes out of the State. The ratio between exports and imports of manufactured articles, in favor of the latter, is entirely too high. And while Interior States have increased (notably Missouri and Ohio) the former three hundred per cent during the last decade, rapidly and steadily in amount of capital and labor employed in manufactures, we have remained practically stationary. Yet perhaps of all our boasted advantages the facility for manufacturing is pre-eminent. With a climate that admits of equalized labor throughout the year, with coal and iron in abundance lying well nigh untouched at our doors, with superior geographical position for export to the Orient, we are yet behind in those enterprises which are indices of permanent prosperity.

We need plenty of capital at low rates, no matter whence it comes. Capital from England and Germany at three to five per cent, if practicable, capital from the East even, if we can do no better, at the rate of seven per cent. A very few in this city have already obtained foreign capital; this gives rise to the expectation that more will follow. While we write, money in New York rules at three to four per cent on time loans. This is exceptional, but imagine such a state of things in San Francisco.

To procure this capital after all it is only required that we should make ourselves heard in the more distant money markets of the world, to direct attention to the many industries of the State that are dragging on a precarious existence or perishing for lack of it, when saving the difference of six or eight per cent would by itself place them on a firm footing. When outside capitalists can be made to see that there are investments to be made here that are among the safest of the [illegible] with enough money [illegible] estate at rates [illegible] to them while offering perfect security, then and then only can we hope for an improvement that will prove lasting.

Our Wheat Surplus

From the best information [illegible] we gather some statistics in relation to the wheat crop last year in Oregon. The estimates of the surplus [illegible] wheat yet remaining in the country and being carried over into the ensuing harvest [illegible] of course approximate only, as there is but little possibility of giving correct figures. So also are the exports to the Sound ports [illegible] the exact figures are difficult to procure. However the following table will show the surplus [illegible] for all practical statistical purposes—counting [illegible] as the equivalent of so much wheat.

[illegible] wheat we have a total of one million five hundred and sixty six [thousand] [illegible] hundred and sixty bushels [illegible] Suppose our surplus this year to [illegible] greater than last—that being according to reliable authority a [illegible] estimate—we shall have on hand when this year's crop is gathered [illegible] bushels of the new and 1,900,000 [illegible] last year [illegible] it will seem [illegible] when [illegible] sider that it will [illegible] sixty five vessels of 1,000 tons capacity each to carry it from our shores [illegible] the lowest rate [illegible] the average Liverpool quotations for the past year would be worth in that market $[illegible] [illegible]
